

ABSTRACT

A method and system for collecting and providing consumer information to a user can include a series of steps. The steps can include receiving from a requesting computer a request for consumer information from a user. The request can identify a consumer. The step of retrieving the requested consumer information corresponding to the identified consumer from at least one network location can be included. The consumer information can include at least one data item. Also, the method can include transferring the at least one data item in the retrieved consumer information to a corresponding field in a user interface in the requesting computer.

P1003894;3